CHINESE RELENTLESSLY SLAY ENEMIES

SHELL MEN TRAPPED BY FLOODS

Heavy Fighting For Yangtse Key Points

Chengchow, July 2.

Bringing their heavy artillery into action, the Chinese hurled tons of explosive on the Japanese troops trapped in the flooded areas lying between the Chia Lu River and the tributaries of the Hwai River, flowing through east Honan, yesterday, inflicting heavy casualties.

The Japanese who withdrew from Yushih, 45 kilometres south-west of Kaifeng, had crossed the Chia Lu River on rafts and wooden boats. But with the further rise of the rivers they were unable to proceed farther, many of their boats having overturned in the swirling currents.

Marooned at Kumiao, Erhlangmiao, Siaoehai, Ta-chang and Changssu, they were subjected to a terrific bombardment by the Chinese who closed in on them from several sides.

After the recapture of Yushih, the Chinese seized large quantities of arms and ammunition abandoned by the Japanese. These include 50 cylinders of poison gas, two motor cars, one machine-gun and 20 cases of shells.

Several field pieces and 400 shells buried by the Japanese upon their retreat have also been discovered by the Chinese.—Central News.

Hsiangchow's Fate Uncertain

Hankow, July 1.
Although severe fighting still continued to-day east and west of Matang there seems no doubt that the village of Matang is in the hands of the Japanese.

Hsiangchow, which is two miles east of Matang, is still partly in the possession of the Chinese, and its ultimate fate is considered uncertain. No change is reported in the situation west of Matang, where the hill terrain favours the Chinese defensive tactics.

Contrary to Japanese claims, it would appear that the boom across the Yangtze River in the vicinity of Matang is still intact.

Chinese military circles have not abandoned hope of recapturing Matang, and in this connection it is pointed out that the Japanese forces there are still numerically inferior to the Chinese.—Trans-Ocean.

Invaders Halted

Hankow, July 1.
The Japanese advance from Tientsin on Taifu, although supported by tanks and heavy artillery, is reported to have been completely halted by the Chinese.

SUCCEEDS TERAUCHI IN CHINA

General Koigo In Supreme Command

Peiping, July 1.
Important changes in the command of the Japanese North China Army were made yesterday when General Koigo, former Chief of the General Staff of the Kwangtung Army, and at present Governor General of Korea, took over supreme command, succeeding General Terauchi.

Lt. Gen. K. Dohara, the "Lawrence of Manchuria" becomes Chief of the General Staff, while Lt. Gen. Kita, in charge of the Political Department, has been replaced by Lt. Gen. Shigetsugu.

Lt. Gen. Umetani has been appointed to the command of the Japanese forces on the Peiping-Hankow Railway.—Trans-Ocean.

Franco Orders Attacks On Ships to Cease

Burgos, July 1.

General Franco has ordered the cessation of attacks on all foreign shipping.

It is understood that this action has been taken in a studious effort to avoid hitting British merchant ships.—United Press.

ADVISERS LEAVING TUESDAY

Coming To Colony On Swastika Special

Thirty-four German military advisers to China are leaving Hankow for Hongkong on Tuesday by a "Swastika Special."

Under the leadership of Baron von Falkenhausen, the military advisers are obeying the recent order by Hitler to resign their appointments with the Chinese Government.

The "Swastika Special," so-called because it will be a purely German special express with the swastika emblem liberally displayed on the roof of the coaches to warn Japanese airmen, will leave Hankow at dawn on Tuesday and will arrive in Hongkong on the following day.

Over 20 wives of the advisers, including Baroness von Falkenhausen, are now in Hongkong, awaiting the arrival of their husbands. Many of the wives arrived here by the international refugee train on Thursday.

Although all of the German military advisers have now decided to quit China, several, it is believed, will not be able to return to Germany, owing to their strong anti-Nazi views.

In some circles it is reported that the German advisers only reached unanimous decision to leave China this week. Previously, it was announced, several had announced intention to disobey the edict from Berlin, and to fulfil their contracts with the Chinese Government.

It is believed that, even as late as last Monday, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek made strenuous efforts to get the German Government to reconsider its decision to recall all the German advisers.

ALL-TIME RECORD FOR HEAT

Hongkong Swelters In Hottest June

An all-time record for sustained heat in June has been recorded in Hongkong.

Never before has the Colony experienced such a succession of hot days and nights, with so little rain, in this month of the year. Among Europeans there have been several cases of near-prostration.

Last month produced some exceptionally hot and dry weather. For example, the mean maximum temperature was 83, as compared with a normal mean maximum of 77.7 degrees.

For six successive days, including yesterday, July 1, the maximum daily temperature was over 90, and this is believed to be the longest period of sustained readings above 90 yet known for the period.

Actually for the month there were seven daily readings of 90 and over, and the lowest maximum registered was 86 on June 3.

Rainfall has been exceptionally low, a total of 2.99 inches falling for the 30 days in June. This compares with the normal monthly rainfall of 15.524 inches, in other words 12.518 inches below the normal.

The maximum rainfall for June is 34.375 inches, and the record minimum 2.335 inches. Thus during last month Hongkong registered only .725 inch above the minimum.

There were 17 rainless days during the month, and nine of them consecutive from June 1 to 9. The most rain during one period of 24 hours was half an inch.

TERRIBLE RAINS IN MANILA

Manila, July 1.

Three days' continuous downpour has flooded Manila and completely disrupted communications with Cavite.

At least two are dead, while scores of families living in the low-lying areas are homeless.

The phenomenal total of 25 inches of rain was recorded at Baguio in 24 hours.

The Philippines Clipper, which was to have left for Hongkong on Saturday morning, has cancelled its flight.—Trans-Ocean.

FRANCO-TURKISH TREATY SIGNED

Paris, July 1.

France has concluded a pact with Turkey which includes, among provisions, joint guaranty and control of Alexandretta.

A second friendship treaty, stabilising conditions in the eastern Mediterranean, and a third treaty, in which Syria is included, guaranteeing the Syrian frontiers, will also be signed in the near future.—United Press.

SPAIN TO MAINTAIN MIGHTY AIR FLEET IF INSURGENTS WIN

Saragossa, July 1.

If the Insurgents win the Civil War, Spain will have a peace-time air force of 2,000 planes, which will enable her to "once more assume her rightful place among the nations of the world."

This revelation was made to United Press to-day in an exclusive interview with General Alfredo Kidelan, Chief of the Insurgent Air Force.

General Kidelan said that, simultaneous with the development of an air force, Nationalist Spain would develop civil aviation in line with other countries.

Since the commencement of the civil war, he said, the Insurgents had built a powerful air force.

"Most of the air force work has been carried out by Spaniards, and the experience they have gained fighting for the honour and integrity of Spain will lay the foundation of a powerful post-war force which will meet the necessities of a modern nation."

General Kidelan disclosed that the Spanish Nationalist air force would be composed of two brigades and two independent squadrons, with more than 100 commanders, 200 captains and 600 lieutenants, apart from recruits in training.—United Press.

New Planes For U.S. Air Force

$14,000,000 Contract
Awarded

Washington, July 1.

The Department of War has awarded contracts exceeding $14,000,000 for ninety-eight aeroplanes and extensive air corps equipment.

The contract is believed to form the largest order for aircraft in the history of the United States Army.

Contracts include one for thirteen additional "Flying Fortresses," giving the United States a total of fifty-two of these huge bombers.

Mr. Louis Johnson, Acting Secretary of State for War, stated that the contracts marked the culmination of a year of intensified effort towards the objective of the Army Board to procure 2,320 modern first-line aircraft by July, 1940.

During the fiscal year ending yesterday, contracts were placed for 898 machines, which are equal, in not superior, to similar types in any part of the world.

The Army has clearly established the fact that the United States is not lagging behind other nations, but had assumed, and would maintain, its position in the forefront of aviation.—Reuters.

CHINESE RESISTANCE GROWS IN STRENGTH

Peiping, July 2.

With the approach of the first anniversary of the Sino-Japanese War, the Japanese forces find themselves battling to-day near the points where the opening shots were fired on July 7 last year.

Guerrillas are active within a few miles west of Peiping, while fighting is proceeding between guerrillas and the Japanese in Nankow Pass.

A large force of guerrillas in the neighbourhood of Miyun has forced the Japanese to bring their artillery into action in an attempt to blast them from their positions in the holes inside the Great Wall.

The Japanese troops have also forced to launch a general campaign in the triangle formed by Peiping, Tientsin and Tianjin.

Japanese military authorities estimate that there are now 250,000 Chinese guerrillas in the provinces of Hopei, Shantung and Shanai. This excludes the 28 divisions of Chinese regulars massed in Shansi, against whom Japanese reinforcements are now advancing for the third time since last October.—Reuters.

DOCTOR ON TRIAL FOR ABORTION

London, July 1.

Deliberately seeking to force a test case, although the maximum penalty is penal servitude for life, Dr. Aleck William Bourne, one of Great Britain's most distinguished surgeons and obstetricians, has been committed to trial for an abortion on a girl aged 14.

David Thomas, a 22-year-old Royal Horse Guardsman was sentenced to four years' imprisonment for raping the girl.—United Press.

Foreigners Agree

ORIGINAL OBJECTS OF CHINA INVASION WIDELY EXTENDED

Aims to Create Great New Puppet State in North

Shanghai, July 1.

Despite Japanese statements regarding her objectives in China, foreign consular, military and business sources are unanimous in considering that the original broad objectives were:

(a) Occupation of Chinese territory north of the Yellow River, including the areas containing China's most important resources;

(b) Re-establishment of peace in the occupied areas north of the Yellow River, and creation of a new puppet regime;

(c) Development of North China with foreign capital, at the same time forcing the withdrawal of competing foreign business through the establishment of Japanese monopolies, institution of anti-foreign tariffs, etc.

Foreign sources are unanimously of the opinion, after a year's experience in the Japanese occupied areas, the Japanese plans for this region are identical with those for Manchukuo in 1931.

The unexpected resistance under Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek resulted in a fourth general policy, that of crushing the Kuomintang.

Foreign military observers believe that this decision is suicidal to the Japanese, due to the resultant extension of the Japanese lines before they have consolidated their position in North China.

It is believed that they might have succeeded in their original objectives had they not been so ill-advised as to undertake the crushing of the Central Government.—United Press.

Count Can't Speak To His Countess

London, July 1.

Count von Haugwitz-Reventlow appeared at the Bow Street Police Court to-day, and was remanded until next Tuesday.

He was asked to give an undertaking to the Court not to communicate with his wife, formerly Barbara Hutton, American millions heiress, under any circumstances, after the Counsel for the Countess made a guarded and dramatic reference to "fire-arms." Count von Haugwitz-Reventlow was allowed bail at £2,000, half in his own surety.—United Press.

GERMANY ACCEPTS LIABILITY FOR LOAN

Solid Agreement
With Britain

London, July 1.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer's announcement in the House of Commons regarding the Anglo-German debt agreement came after the close of the Stock Exchange, but Austrian and German loans were marked up appreciably in unofficial street dealings, despite the meagreness of actual business.

The agreement is too intricate to enable the City to arrive at a full appreciation of its terms, but the rise in prices illustrates the generally favourable reception.

The German Government's undertaking not only to continue the debt service on the Austrian loans, but also to transfer 80 per cent. of the interest from non-Rolch loans to interest from non-Rolch loans, is particularly welcomed in the City. It is estimated that his transfer will involve some £4,000,000, which is considerably more than at present.

Germany guarantees to maintain the present proportion between British exports of finished goods and her total exports, while providing a sliding scale for an allocation from the sterling proceeds of German exports.

The opinion is expressed that Great Britain's firm attitude and threat to establish an exchange clearing house has been instrumental.

STOP PRESS TERRIBLE TOLL IN SWATOW

It is learned from semi-official Chinese sources here that the death toll in yesterday's bombing of Swatow approaches 200. It is estimated that the total of casualties was 400, of which 200 were pupils at the Fourth Municipal School. This building was apparently demolished by bombs.

Nine Japanese bombers took part in a violent attack on Swatow yesterday afternoon between 4.30 and 6 p.m. They rained in flights of three machines, and altogether eleven attacks were launched, with over 50 bombs dropped.

The objectives appeared to be the power station, railway station and the Municipal Headquarters, but as yet it has not been ascertained whether any direct hits were scored, or what damage was caused.

In addition to dropping bombs, the raiders let loose a flood of leaflets over the city.

There was no anti-aircraft resistance to the raiders, who bombed at will.

400 CASUALTIES

Swatow, July 2.
Casualties of the Japanese terrific bombing yesterday were roughly estimated at 400, while about 200 houses and shops were demolished. In the Fourth Municipal Primary School alone there were 200 killed and wounded. The school was completely wrecked by several bombs.

Several bombs landed in front of the Swatow Municipal Government killing and wounding about 100, and destroying 70 houses.

Other places bombed included the Municipal Library, the Red Cross Society, the Ho Tai Filature, Hospital and the Workshop for the Poor.—Central News.

Cotton Frocks

Easy to make—
easy to launder.
You can choose
pleats, smocking
or a gauged finish

What special points do you look for when you choose a style for a summer frock? You want one that looks smart and trim, of course, but don't you also look out for a style that will be easy to make, easy to wash and iron?

These three frocks have all been designed specially with a thought to such practical points.

Back-Buttoning

THE first one, sketched on the left, is particularly easy to launder. The reason? It buttons all down the back from neck to hem—as you can see by the back-view sketch—so when you come to iron it you can lay it out flat on the ironing board.

Incidentally, that back-buttoning is grand for when you go on holiday, for you can wear the frock on the beach for sun-bathing, unbuttoning the top three buttons of the bodice to bare your back to the sea air.

The front of the frock is plain, except for two jaunty patch pockets. The bodice is stitched on the shoulder into narrow pleats which continue all down the skirt.

Pleats are firmly stitched at the waist to keep them well creased. That pleated bodice is very kind to the full figure. The vertical line of the pleats seems to take inches off one's bust measurement.

Flowered Print

THIS style of frock looks particularly pretty in a flowered material, as you can see by the sketch. Flowered waffle cotton or a creaseless printed linen would be nice. Choose very gay buttons for it, and have a belt in the same colour.

Striped frock, sketched in the centre, has a rather romantic garden-party air about it. Perhaps it's that decorative gauging at neck and waist, or the graceful folds of the full skirt, and the dainty puff sleeves. If you enjoy embroidery, work bands of smocking at neck and waist in place of the gauging. It would give a delightfully individual touch to the frock.

It needs to be made up in voile, or a soft silk that drapes well. Our artist has sketched it in a striped material, as vivid striped chiffon and georgette are all the rage for this type of frock this summer. You can buy chiffon in bright blues blended with cyclamen and black stripes, or green with tan and rich dark brown.

Trim Pleats

NEAT rows of pleats down bodice and skirt, and a becoming collar, are points to note about the third dress, worn by the seated figure. You will wear this dress to the office on warm days, and it will still look fresh and trim in the evening, so you can go on wearing it when you rush off after work to a supper "date" with the confident feeling that you are looking your best.

And you, lady of leisure, will find it equally useful to wear on those hot days in town, when you have many hours' shopping to do, and want a cool dress that will carry you smartly through the day.

Note that the bodice and skirt button all the way down to the hem, so the dress is as easy to iron as the design with buttons as the back.

Choose a fairly heavy cotton or linen for this frock, as the pleats will hang better in this style of material; or have it in art silk plique which always looks fresh and cool and is obtainable in such lovely soft pastel shades.

SUMMER SALADS

AS soon as the days get warmer, we lose our appetite for hot dishes and back comes the preference for cool, green salads.

Salads for luncheon are a great standby and have a great deal to be said in their favour. Properly made, they can form a substantial, satisfying and health-giving meal, they eliminate the trouble of cooking in the middle of the day, and, artistically arranged on individual plates, they solve any difficulties of serving.

Tomato Baskets

Choose firm tomatoes, cut two wedge-shaped pieces out of the top to form basket shapes, and carefully scoop out a little of the pulp with a small spoon. Pile into the baskets finely minced ham and tongue which has been mixed with a little well-flavoured white sauce. Scatter some chopped parsley on top, and serve at least two of the baskets per person on a base of shredded lettuce leaves covered with mixed, sliced carrots, potatoes and peas which have been tossed in a little mayonnaise.

Veal Castles

Stew a knuckle of veal in just sufficient water to cover, with some mixed herbs tied in a muslin bag ring of raw grated carrot, and over for at least three hours—until the meat is very tender. Remove the fancy shapes cut from boiled beef-bone and the bag of herbs, and mince root and whole radishes cut to form the meat finely. Mix the meat and the flower shapes.

Egg and Spinach

Cut cold hard-boiled eggs in half lengthwise, remove the yolks, and refill the whites with cold cooked spinach well seasoned with cayenne, scattering the powdered yolks over the top. Serve on a bed of well-arranged and drained watercress, and arrange round the eggs plenty of cold, cooked, sliced vegetables available.

Italian Salad

In the centre of a bed of lettuce put a mound of spaghetti which has been boiled with a little onion, strained, seasoned and mixed with tomato sauce. Round this make a ring of raw grated carrot, and over for at least three hours—until the meat is very tender. Remove the fancy shapes cut from boiled beef-bone and the bag of herbs, and mince root and whole radishes cut to form the meat finely. Mix the meat and the flower shapes.

COULD NOT LIFT ARMS ABOVE HEAD

Suffered Agonies with Rheumatism

This woman was practically crippled with agonising rheumatism in her back, arms and legs. For two months, she endured this painful condition, then, like many another sufferer, she decided to try Kruschen Salts. Read her letter:—

"About fifteen months ago, I had rheumatism in my arms, back and legs. The pain in my arms and legs after getting warm in bed were excruciating, especially in my arms. Also, after sitting for any length of time, I had to make several tries before I could get up. I was like that for two months, and could not reach above my head. I read so much about Kruschen Salts that I thought I would try them. I am so glad to say that for more than a year I have not had the slightest return of my rheumatism."—(Mrs.) H.E.

Do you realise what causes rheumatism? Nothing but sharp-edged uric acid crystals which form as the result of sluggish eliminating organs. Kruschen Salts can always be counted upon to clear those painful crystals from the system.

That perpetual Behave Yourself

A SMALL boy once said to me, "All this behaving . . . it is werry hard to do." may kill childish good manners

He was about six, and in the half hour I spent with him his mother told him twice to stop hopping, once to run properly, once to say thank you for his nice present. She was at great pains to prove to me that it was not for want of training that her son's manners were imperfect.

I liked his grave little smile when I gave him the sweets. It was from his heart. The compulsory "thank you very much" which came afterwards was not necessary at all except to foster his mother's vanity. "Behaving" to many children means to stop doing a number of delicious things. It means "very well, thank you" and "thank you for having me" when you are grown-up ought to see that you are in rude health and like going to any kind of party. You are not behaving when you pick up some attractive object to look at it closely—especially when you are visiting Questions, interrupting, loud noises of any kind are ruled out of "behaving" for nursery folk.

ONE of the greatest assets throughout life is the possession of good manners. They are the foundation of all charm, and are of more lasting value than high intellectual powers and great physical beauty. While conventional politeness is not to be despised, the fine courtesy which springs from consideration of others betokens real manners. The parent who believes this should act accordingly.

The mother who pushes out of her turn to the shop counter is saying to

SHOT NUN AIDS SIX IN GUNMAN'S TRAP

Jerusalem, June 15.

Sister Anastasia, Russian Orthodox nun, stepped into a bus at 5.30 this morning in order to attend an early morning choir service in Jerusalem's Russian Cathedral. She never got there. She ran into a gunman's trap and was seriously wounded.

She caught the bus at John the Baptist's village, Ain Karim, (Arabic for "The Well in the Vineyard"). As the bus was climbing a steep approach to the west of Jerusalem a man hidden behind a garden fence rained bullets through the open windows of the bus from a quick-firing Mauser automatic.

Six Arab passengers were wounded. Sister Anastasia, in spite of her wounds, tended the shrieking passengers who lay on the floor of the bus.

Police hunted for the gunman but found no trace of him.

Jerusalem's hospitals are crowded to-day as a result of a sudden outburst of violence. Within an hour there were seven separate shooting incidents. Two people were killed, twenty injured.

Since Sunday rioters, using rifles, revolvers, bombs, daggers and stones, have laid ambushes throughout Palestine. Altogether forty-three casualties are reported. Four Jews and three Arabs have been killed. Wounded include eighteen Jews, seventeen Arabs and Sister Anastasia.

And The Jury Saw The Joke

FIVE-MINUTE comedy is Southampton coroner's court: Girl witness steps up to take the oath.

Coroner looks aghast. Takes a second look at her. Hesitates to administer the oath. Looks again at her. Then in tones of subdued surprise and horror, he says to her:

"This is a court of law. You must not think you can please yourself how you dress when you come into a court of law. It is not correct to appear in court without a hat."

The young woman looked surprised and confused. Her hand went instinctively towards her head. Then the court officials and the jury saw the joke—and the hat.

It was the naughtiest and neatest piece of headgear ever seen in the court. So neat and natty and so admirably blended with the dark-brown hair of the witness that the eagle eye of the coroner had failed to notice it.

Hurried whispers and explanations by court officials were followed by a gracious apology.

"I withdraw all I said," remarked the coroner as he proceeded to administer the oath.

CHARLES, 108 WIRES TO MARY, 106

MR. CHARLES ARNOLD, of Rothwell Street, N.W., 108 years old, sent greetings to Mrs. Mary Stubbin, of Halford Road, Richmond, on her 106th birthday, and this is what he wired:

Birthday greetings—
With but two years betwixt us,
Our ages to divide,
Best wishes I send you,
Ere below I've to slide.

Forty guests, including the Mayor of Richmond (Councillor C. E. Mills), attended Mrs. Stubbin's party. She would not have candles on her cake "because they make a mess."

TIGER CUBS REARED IN BEDROOM

Because the mother neglected them the first tiger cubs to be born in Whipsnade Zoo's grass-lined tiger dell were taken into Head Keeper Bates's bedroom and fed every three hours with glucose and water.

They took it drop by drop. A collic foster-mother arrived from Dudley Zoo to take over parental duties, and there is a hope that the zoo will be able to rear the new-comers.

All other tigers born at Whipsnade arrived in the cement-lined Tiger Pit.

The new cubs—one tiger and two tigresses—made Rance, the Whipsnade tigress, a grandmother.

She has made a name for herself in zoological history by the regularity with which she has increased Britain's tiger population.

BOY WHO JOKED WITH RESCUERS

Although in agony, Robert Elston, aged 24, of Lyddon Grove Wandsworth, laughed and joked while police, ambulance workers, and trolleybus employees worked to free him when his leg was trapped under a bus in Garratt-lane, Epsom, London, S.W.

Elston was boarding the vehicle when he slipped and fell between the wheels. He was taken to hospital badly hurt.

NAZIS MAY OUTCAST CHILDREN OF JEWS

Berlin, June 15.

Germany's Jews, now suffering a new anti-Semitic Nazi drive, learned to-day that children born in future to German-Jewish parents will probably not be considered German citizens.

Such Jewish children may grow up as outcasts in Germany, with no nationality and no rights of citizenship. They will be one step lower than their parents, who are now considered "second-rate" citizens under the Nazi Reich.

The declaration was made by Dr. Stuckart, Secretary of State in the Ministry of the Interior, in the Journal of the Academy of German Law.

He declares that "it is no longer possible to permit a further influx of Jews into the German national society by means of legitimate or illegitimate births.

"The new German citizenship laws will have to make provision that the Jews cannot obtain German citizenship by birth, naturalisation or marriage."

This is taken to mean that if a German Jew marries a non-German Jewess, she will not automatically become a German citizen and would not be given a German passport.

Dr. Stuckart points out that the same regulation will be applied to gipsies, which means that Jews will be placed on the same footing as the nomads.

Several hundred Jews have been arrested during the last twenty-four hours. Their relatives have not been informed why. These arrests followed last week's raid on Jewish cafes, in which 700 persons were rounded up.

Julius Brabec, Czechoslovak Consul General, arriving in New York, hailed the united spirit of his people and asserted his country would not tolerate any invasion by Germany, but would fight.

4 A.M. INTRUDER GIVEN TEA

Nurse Talks Until The Police Arrive

A nurse employed by Viscountess Tredegar in Grosvenor Square, Mayfair, stated at Marlborough Street recently that while she was sitting in the drawing room at 4.30 a.m. a man walked in. She gave him tea and talked to him until the police arrived.

William David McCoy, 22, house porter, no fixed address, was committed for trial accused of burglariously breaking and entering the premises and stealing property worth £25.

The nurse, Miss Annie Fraser, said that McCoy put his head round the door and walked into the room. She got up and he said, "I have broken into your house."

"COULD HAVE GOT AWAY"
"I asked him what he wanted," said Miss Fraser. "He said, 'I have been out all morning looking for a job, and I am so desperate and hungry. I want some food.' I asked how he got in and he said, 'I got in through a window downstairs beside the kitchen. I saw a light upstairs and came to see who was there.'"

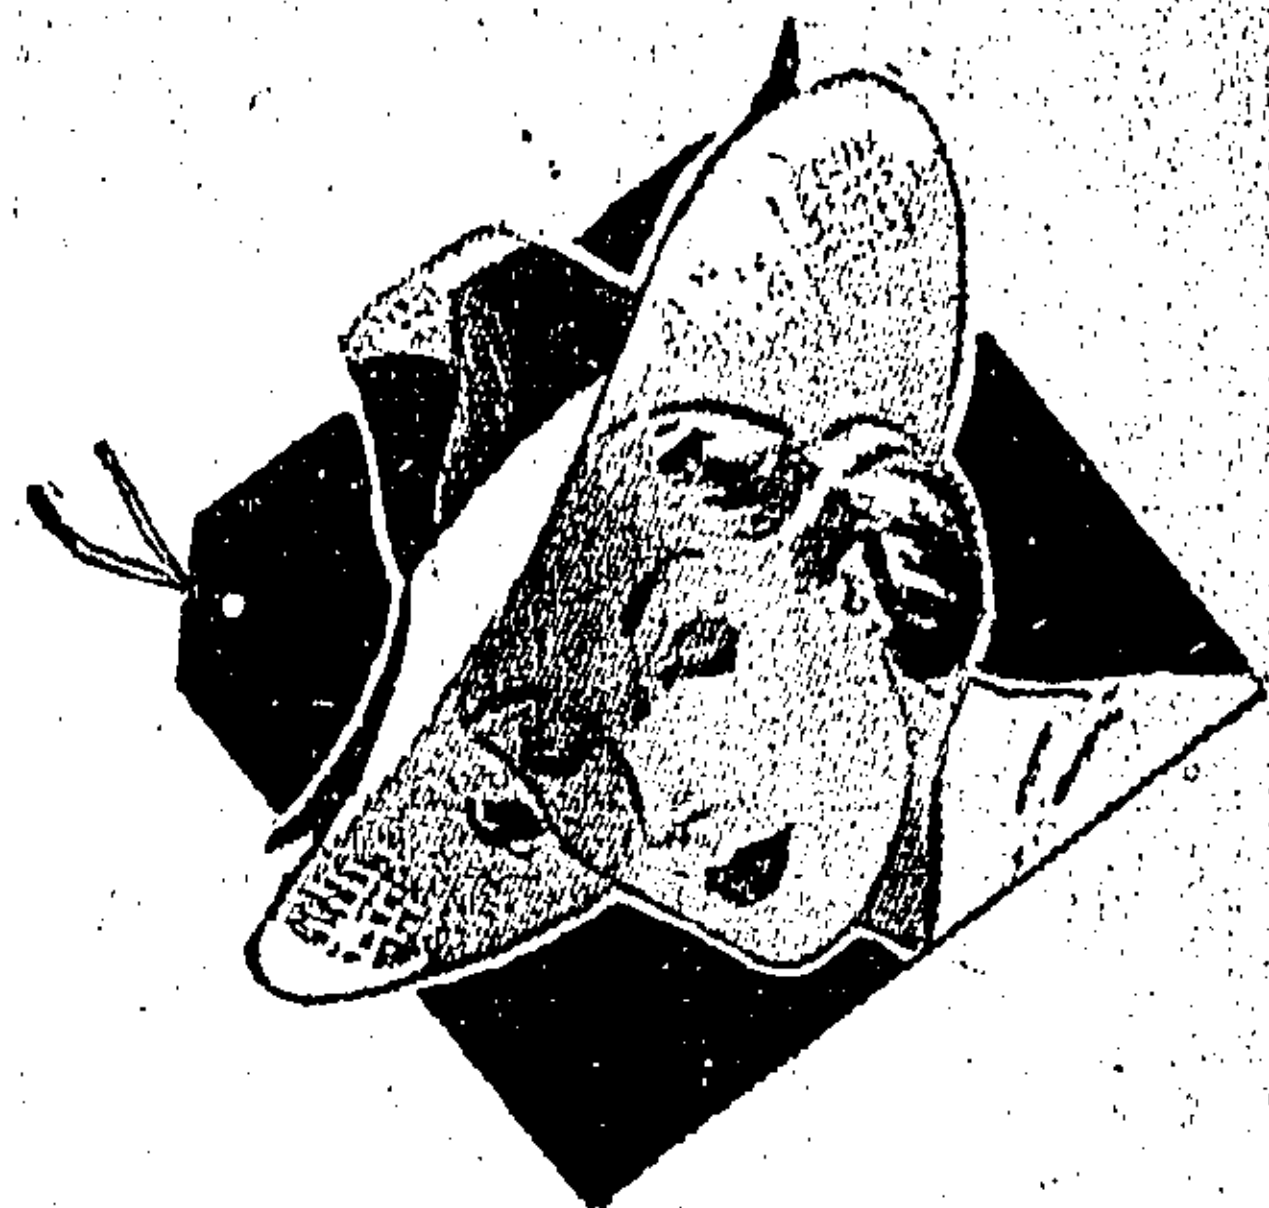

"I invited him in to have some tea. He said he would like some food as he was hungry. He smoked a cigarette. I went to the parlourmaid's room, told her what had happened, and asked her to inform the police. I came back to the drawing room and gave the man tea. We sat and talked for a bit, and then the police arrived."

Miss Fraser said she noticed later that a silver box, wireless set, and a clock had been moved. These articles were worth £25. Drawers in the dining-room had been opened and the contents disarranged.

P.C. Hickmott stated that McCoy said to him, "I could have got away if I liked."

many months, and partly as I am indisposed.

28th.—This day should be a day of humiliation and mourning being the anniversary of the date on which Mr. L. George did lose the peace at Versailles, the Army and Navy having won the war in spite of him. And Lord! to look round upon the world now and see to what a pass his lack of vision and that of the other, fond politicians have brought us, this day as hot as ever, and still no rain which we do need mightily bad. This evening played a pair match at Lawn Bowls and did win though but hardly; but Lord! how I am out of practice.

20th.—Still hot and very busy at my office. And when I leave it at a quarter before six it is as hot as most noontides. Later to the Hospital to visit the sick and so home, and thanks be to God a breeze springs up about eight of the clock. Dined with my Children and so to bed.

Accompaniment: Porgi Amor ("Le Nozze Di Figaro"—Act 2); Dove Song (Vanish'd Are Ye—"Le Nozze Di Figaro"—Act 3).

HAWKERS IN HONGKONG

well-defined model which may well boast an antiquity of unnumbered generations. Without vociferous utterances, no hawkler could possibly do any business, and that is where the element of a general nuisance creeps in; for as is well known, in certain portions of the Colony well-defined areas are laid out in which it is prohibited for hawklers to cry their wares, and although these boundaries are carefully stipulated, it is difficult to enforce the prohibition. Even as far back as 1845, one of our earliest laws—the Summary Ordinances of 1845—had a provision dealing with such matters as hawkers' cries. The idea was, of course, an excellent one, but it seems to have been honoured more in the breach; for no district included in any of the notifications from that day to this, has ever been entirely immune from the evil. But the whole question revolves around the long mooted one of the hawkler and his vocation. If he is to be tolerated, he must be granted the right to utter his trade call with the minimum of restrictions; if he is to be an easy one to deal with, yet when scrutinised in its entirety is of surprising complexity; for to a large number of parents and children of the poorer class of Chinese, hawkling is the only alternative to the slough of despond and helplessness or the commencement of a life of mendicancy or crime. In short, the only possible solution seems to be one of three: the laissez-faire of the present; the permitting of unlimited hawkling; or the rigid suppression of the practice. The last is perhaps impossible; for it would mean the institution of a system of Poor Law Relief which might be more of an evil than the one it would supplant.

Dancer Attacked After Refusing Kiss

Paris, May 27.
"When I tried to kiss her, she just said: 'Bye-bye.' I was furious, we struggled, and she was hurt...."
Thirty-two-year-old Raymond Chippolini, a naturalised Frenchman, found guilty in a Paris court of assaulting and robbing Mrs. Joan Keppel, an English dancer, in a Paris street, spoke these words in his defence to-day.

He was sentenced to 13 months' imprisonment and ten years' banishment. It was stated that he had been sentenced five times for theft and attempted murder.

After Mrs. Keppel—whose husband is said to be a member of a well-known British naval family—had told the court that Chippolini had snatched her handbag, kicked her, and struck her on the jaw, Chippolini retorted:

"I did nothing of the kind. We simply struggled because you refused to kiss me. After all, we had been talking together for two hours."

"Naturally I was angry. Any man would be in the circumstances. The ring with the naval crown on it, which you say I stole, fell off in the struggle."

Chippolini's counsel, Maître Gravier, told the court: "I ask you to treat this whole affair in the light of the scene—Montmartre."

Mrs. Keppel's advocate said: "My client at first thought that this man was a polite Frenchman. But she found she was mistaken."

To-night I found her at a Paris theatre, singing and dancing in the French version of "No, No, Nanette."

"Thank goodness it's all over," she said. "While I was in hospital the theatre where I was due to play kept a place for me in the show."

"I have been separated from my husband for some years. Yes, he belongs to the naval family. Now I want to forget all about that attack."

BOY KILLED BY HIS FRIEND

Found guilty of the murder of a 17-year-old youth—his friend—William England Brown, aged 47, collapsed in the Old Bailey dock and had to be supported as the judge passed the death sentence.

Then he was half-carried from the dock, shrieking and groaning. The jury recommended him mercy.

Brown killed Alfred David Brown, of Brockley.

Mr. G. B. McClure, prosecuting, said the two were not related. The boy used to visit William Brown.

On April 19 the landlady found the boy lying bleeding on the floor. A letter in his pocket, written by William Brown, was read. It ran:—

"Dear Alfred,—I give you this statement so as to clear you of any unpleasant inquiries with regard to my position."

"I have on no occasion given you money. You have visited me here as my friend, which friendship I shall still hold for you although we part."

Brown, in the witness-box, said, when he received some money after his mother's death he gave the boy presents.

Contemplating marriage, though her engagement to Jimmy Johnson, Elizabeth, N. J., gentleman horseman, has not been officially announced, is Miss Frances Dodge, 22-year-old daughter of the late John F. Dodge. Her father and his brother, Horace, founded the Dodge Motor Company and built a fortune of which Frances inherited $40,000,000. Miss Dodge, pictured above as she piloted a sulky in a society horse show, is the sister of Mrs. Isabelle Dodge Sloan, race horse owner.

STREAMLINING WILL INCREASE SPEED OF THE QUEEN ELIZABETH

London.
A new method of increasing speed is being employed in the construction of the new Cunard-White Star liner, Queen Elizabeth.

It has long been known that the overlay of hundreds of underwater plates has acted as a drag, so it has been decided to streamline the liner's hull with a new type of cement so that the entire under-body will be smooth-faced.

Tank experiments with model ships, bevel-finished, have shown a remarkable absence of friction and creation of eddies.

Not So Gay Vienna

Last month the Nazis took a Viennese town councillor into the concentration camp at Dachau. His wife and baby son received a happy letter from him every week.

"I am all right, dear. Don't worry—things are not so bad here," was the refrain.

Several days ago the councillor's wife received one of these cheerful notes. In the afternoon came another letter:

"Your husband has died. If you care to bury the ashes in Vienna, you will be given permission to fetch them. Hell Hitler."

There is no official explanation of how the man died. But by curious coincidence his cell companion "committed suicide" on the same day.

THE SCHOOL AND SOCIETY

In political and social life there are those who, looking with "the evil eye of envy" upon the achievements of others, desire to see all men reduced to the dead level of a dull mediocrity. The devices they employ for the purpose of bringing about this result are well known. Some legislatures have passed laws intended to penalise thrift, to discourage business initiative, to place workers and shirkers on the same economic level. To render aid and comfort to those who look upon a contract as a mere scrap of paper seems to be the desire of some politicians of the baser sort. They denounce the man who is out for a reasonable profit, or desires to save for a rainy day, or lends his money out at interest. Some of them propose that the Government should "take over" from the banks the savings of individual depositors. They do not use the word "confiscate" or "commandeer." They prefer the euphemism "take over," which has a pleasant, auspicious disarming quality.

Finding that their theories and proposals do not go down with the average man, the levellers may turn their attention to the schools in the hope of being able to indoctrinate pupils and teachers alike with radical theories of the kind indicated above. Of course, the tactics to be employed in the schools would have to follow pretty much the same lines as those which have been tried in the political field. The agitators will, no doubt, try to discover some way to circumvent those pupils who are ambitious and industrious. For example, competition can be discouraged as far as possible. Those who try to outstrip their fellows can be treated with cold disapproval and can be made to feel that they had better watch their step. Praise and blame can be distributed in a manner and on a system calculated to induce active and energetic students to slow down to an approved average pace. To make the levelling system work it will be necessary to modify greatly, perhaps to destroy, the age-old plan of competitive relations, tests, trials, and examinations. Tommy and Bobby may write the same examinations in mathematics or history, they may work at the same manual training tasks, they may engage in music or other fine art, play ball, or run races, but the better scholar, or artist, or handicraftsman, or athlete, must not, under

BY
GREGORY

One of the most familiar sights in many of the residential districts of the Colony is perhaps the succession of Chinese hawkers—those peripatetic salesmen with peculiar cries—whose presence in Hongkong's crowded thoroughfares imparts a distinctive touch of the East. Not even the ubiquitous ricksha puller affords a more poignant example of the bitter struggle waged by thousands in a brave endeavour to earn an honest livelihood. Apart from their undoubted contribution to "local colour," the growing horde of itinerant peddlers constitutes, moreover, a grave problem which is not at all of easy solution.

It is not estimated that there are no less than ten thousand individuals who may be placed in the broad category of street hawkers and who are the possessors of licences issued by authorities. The number of unlicensed must be many hundreds more. The comparatively small outlay of capital required—fifty cents or a dollar for initial purchase of stock—is enough to enable the street hawkers to increase in the solid surface.

Distinctive Cries

petition is heightened to an enormous degree, and the precarious livelihood of those engaged in the vocation is forcibly reduced.

Supplies Definite Need

Hawking, however, meets with considerable favour amongst the Chinese community; for in adherence to the established habits of generations, it is easier to hearken to the cry of the hawkler than to the piping in the street of the shopkeeper. Remembered, having no shop or stall, has consequently no over-head, and as a result will sell much cheaper than his competitor, the established merchant. In a country where the saving of a copper is a matter of economic necessity the hawkler supplies a definite need, and his willingness to lug his little stock of goods up uncounted flights of stairs for the inspection of prospective clients is another factor which must not be forgotten in assessing his importance.

On the other hand, he is accused of being an unmitigated nuisance, adding to the congestion of our streets, and disturbing the tranquillity of the residential districts by his raucous cries. Still regardless of the carplings of his critics, he is as personally all to his own, that he is as delightfully original as the wares which he hawks for sale.

His wares, to those who have taken the trouble to bestow more than a casual glance have noted, are extremely varied and literally run the gamut of the imagination, ranging from such conventional oddments as paper fans, thread, fruits, etc. to the utterly unexpected. An example of the latter is a strange variety of commerce known in the vernacular as the mak-shing or "bedbug sticks." These are hawked in the streets for about ten cents each, and are a simple but extremely novel form of vermin eradicator—the invention of some un-
Chinese Chinese worthy. These consist of blocks of pine wood, about 1½ inches square and a foot in length,

A very familiar cry, for example, is that of the Chinese counterpart of our "old rag and bone man"—the shau-mai-lo. His intoned trade call is a lengthy one and may be frequently heard almost any time between the hours of sunrise and sunset. It runs as follows:

"Shau-mai! laan-t'ung, laan-t'it. Shau-mai! poh-let tsai-tsun. Shau-mai! kau-poh-chi. Shau-mai! laan tau-shing-kei-hei. Shau-mai! laan tau-shing-kei-hei tip. Shau-mai! yia-pau, mai-pau. Shau-mai! kau yue-hei, laan ngan-mai tau-shing-kei, kan-kan-nai tau-shing-kei. Shau-mai! kau chue-yi-shing, laan ngan-keung. Shau-mai! kau shau-shing. Shau-mai! yin-tsai-mak, ngan-mai-mak. Shau-mai! laan t'ong-tau."

Familiar Calls

Other familiar calls which have met with mingled feelings on the part of the listener are those of the ambulatory tinkler and the itinerant vendor of tangerines. The former, well-known very early is: "Hon-tung! Hon-sok! Say-ching kwai-soh! T'ung-tung-kau! Sau-ching lan t'ong-tau!" "Soldier copper! Soldier tin! Repair foreign locks! Re-nall copper hinges! Repair broken flat-irons!" That of the latter is noted for its staccato abruptness: "T'ai kuh Ch'ü-chau-kom! Ch'ü-chau mat-kom! a!" "Large Swatow tangerines! Sweet Swatow tangerines!" The trade calls of the various hawkers and sellers of course to the innumerable variations, more or less stereotyped, and follow a

MR. PEPYS in HONGKONG

June 23rd.—This day still very hot, and Creed tells me he believes it to be caused by the heat of the air of two or three colonies and Fascists who will struggle interminably in the correspondence of the News Sheet, stating as proven fact what they do wish to be the truth. And indeed I have no leaning to such silly vapouring, and am minded to give up my news sheet if there be much more of it. I do learn from the sheets that it is said by the Government here that the Magazine Park site where the old Military Sanitarium did stand. But this I do take to mean that they may proceed with the laying out of the site, as there must needs be much cutting and terracing, for I am persuaded the present area is not big enough for the House alone. The new doth seem to be things of that great work hath been done against the musket quaters, for when I did come here first the building was derelict; there having been so much malaria there the Army abandoned it and it gradually did blow or fall down. But even now I am not for changing with His Excellency when the new house has been built. As to the old house, there be many who think though I do trust it remains in Government hands. And seeing that I have danced there this quarter of a century I do trust the old House may last my time. To the Clubbe where I have occasion to speak pretty sharp to Mr. Crumtum, and I tell him he lies when he says that there will be a duello here and that the Chinese and party hath chosen pecked fruit as weapons. I have now assured all the friends shall be quiet.

24th.—Talking with Mr. Povy he tells me that the scheme to fire a Vehicular Ferry and use it of Saturday nights as a cabaret did fall to the ground as no license to sell liquor could be granted. And to my mind if the dancing were not enough without intoxicating liquors 'twere as

and so to bed.

26th.—(Lord's Day).—Last night I did sleep but ill and being troubled by an indigestion did not partake of my breakfast but fell to writing letters and later in the garden I did seek to put up an awning, but make not very much of the business. At noon comes Mr. Parde and his Lady and wee do drink our wine in the garden and all very merry. Late afternoon be done the guests take their leave and I do fall asleep until it be nigh six of the clock, and I feare that this overmuch slumber hath an ill effect upon the liver. Walked to the Penke Clubbe where I did read a paper or two and after to Mr. A. Jay's that which doth take my fancy more every time I doe visit it. There I drank some eau-de-vie for my stomach's sake and so home to a cup of broth and so to bed.

27th.—Up betimes, but Lord! how it did irk me to rise, I having slept so ill that I suppose I was for two hours before six of the clock. And then as ever, I did slumber so deep that later by half an hour the boy could scarce wake me. But I doe drag myself to my office and later to my chyrurgeon who prescribes a draught and a diet. And as for the last, it is a simple matter I bear in mind, for all that which to bear it out. But I doe give hearty thanks he does not bid mee praetermit the drinking of all liquors but only of wines, ale, and Hollands waters. But I doe vowe I will touch but little that I may reduce my weight and render my waist smaller. Hearing in the news-sheet I hear tell of a cow in Norfolk that doth give three thousand gallons in a year. And I would that she and some of her kind were now in Hong Kong, for I can no longer buy mee a bottle of milk to my nunchoon in my office. To the Penke Clubbe this night and I doe find four tables playing it being Monday. Played with ill fortune and I doe admit worse skill, partly as I suppose because I have played but little thereof.

Are You Quite Certain

Now, come on—two points for each correct answer, and if you get a total of anything less than 30 I'll have to speak to your father about it.

1.—Murgatroyd, the old sea-dog, is back from another trip and full of information, as usual, he tells me the time at sea is kept by bells, which are struck every—

Hour; two hours; quarter-hour; half-hour; whenever the captain remembers.

Reed instrument; wind instrument; string instrument; love tune; martial air; a noise like haggis.

INSPECTOR PLAYFAIR

EPISODE 68

"MOST stamp-dealers Dumbell," said Joshua Playfair, "are pretty honest chaps. They endeavour to give humanity a square deal."

"That's right, sir," said Dumbell. "Philanthropists, don't they call 'em?"

Playfair assumed an air of mock-severity. "If that's just a Dumbellism," he said, "I will, I suppose, pass muster. If, however, as I suspect—it's sheer damned ignorance, I must reconsider your application for leave."

"Philatelists," said Dumbell hastily.

"Appeal allowed," said Playfair. "Philatelists. And, talking of Philatelists, I was about to proceed from the general to the particular. Have you read of this theft of an 18-cent Antigua?"

"I saw something in the papers this morning."

"Good," said Playfair. "I drew up that statement, you know." He took up some cuttings from his desk.

"Reads quite like an expert description, doesn't it? And so it is, by god. Mr. Armorer helped me. The only thing that's wrong is a misprint in regard to the perforation. They've put 48 instead of 32."

"Careless of them," said Dumbell. "Very careless," said Playfair. "But you remember what Hamlet said. Our indigestion oft doth serve us best and so forth. Which brings me back to my point. That stamp, Dumbell, which is valued at £1,000, was stolen, I believe, by a stamp-dealer. A chap named Nabul. (After all, only a stamp-dealer could hope to dispose of such a thing.) Would you care to join with me in a call on him?"

"I should be charmed," said Dumbell, adopting instinctively the semi-serious vein in which the invitation had been couched.

Nabul Nabul ("Where was their sense of humour?" mused Dumbell) was a swart, intelligent-looking individual of indeterminate age and nationality. He received his callers with an air which seemed, perhaps, a little over-obsequious, but might, for all that have been quite normal.

"Scotland Yard?" he said with lifted eyebrows. "And what can I do for you, gentlemen?"

"We're here," answered Playfair, "to make inquiries into a stamp. The 18-cent Antigua."

"Ah, yes," said Mr. Nabul. "There are only two specimens extant. One is in the British Museum."

"And the other," said Playfair, "was stolen on Monday from an exhibition in Bond Street."

Mr. Nabul's expression or lack of it, now betrayed definitely his opinion.

"What did you want of me?" he inquired after a pause. "An expert opinion as to the value of the stamp?"

"No," said Playfair. "Or, at any rate, not yet. One thing leads to another, Mr. Nabul. It's only fair to tell you that your qualifications as an expert have been seriously called in question."

Nabul seemed taken aback. "What are you implying, sir?" Playfair smiled. "All this is without prejudice. You understand: we chaps have to do what we are asked to do. A suggestion has been made which it's up to you, Mr. Nabul, to repudiate—that you're not, primarily, a philatelist at all. To put it bluntly, that you use this role of philatelist for the transaction of—other business."

Nabul laughed. "I'm not so dense as not to see what you're insinuating. I presume that, as a police officer, you can do such things with impunity. But I can assure you that you'll find no stamp-dealer in London better qualified than myself."

"Prove it," answered Playfair shortly.

"Prove it? How? My whole record proves it."

"The Yard," said Playfair, "would like something more specific. You know, perhaps—how the minds of policemen work."

"Well, what do you suggest?" Nabul was interested.

"Write down a detailed description of the missing stamp."

"Oh, come," said Nabul. "Don't be absurd. I don't carry masses of details in my head. There are thousands of stamps, you know Inspector."

"Of course. But the description of this one is in all the papers this morning." Playfair picked up the Morning Gazette and thrust it forward. "Look at that. Don't tell me you haven't read it. Read it through now, if you like, and then write down the description. If you're an expert philatelist, you can at least do that."

"Of course I can," said Nabul. With barely a glance at the Morning Gazette,

NIGHTLY REVELS OF THE BARN OWL

THERE is an old peel tower I know well in a Cheviot valley, which from long past times has been the residence of a barn owl. On many a summer eve have I watched him issue forth like a ghostly phantom, a terror to roosting birds and creeping things of the night.

Of all our fly-by-nights I like the barn-owl. He is not a roamer; he passes his whole life within a few miles of his home. When family cares weigh upon him, he is the most dutiful of husbands, an example to many of his biped brothers. His hunt for the staff of life for wife and whelps is untiring.

There is hardly another bird to match him in this. When a wife and family with ravenous appetites are to provide for during the breeding season, he must needs have the strenuous life I have seen him perform within intervals of a few minutes, carrying rats, voles, mice, and when the supply is over-abundant, he will break the legs of captured animals so that they can not escape, then go in search of more until his ladder in the gaping wall of the peel tower has a store of victims.

Although a charming bird to look at, he is a terror to approach. In a wild state he is a fiend incarnate. I once climbed up the wall of the old tower to see how his gaping, downy chicks were getting on. He flew at me, dealing death darts at my cap, and making the most blood-curdling shrieks I had ever heard. I beat a hasty retreat, lest in his ferocity he should pluck out my eyes. You may watch his intriguing ways with interest, but keep your nose out of his personal affairs. As a father he is courage personified.

I have seen him tempting his new-begotten offspring in their flight upon life's great adventure. How hazardous, and trying is the work involved, initiating them into how to fend for themselves! When this training is complete they are driven off to fresh pastures. There

THE SNAPSHOT GUILD SUMMER CLOUDS AND SKIES

Clouds help your outdoor pictures. Use a color filter to record them more effectively.

SUMMER is the outdoor season, and one of the season's chief picture charms is the wonderfully rich blue skies against which cloud masses stand out in magnificent fullness and contrast. Given two pictures of identical subjects in which the sky appears, it's a safe wager that your attention will be held by the one effectively showing the clouds against a gray sky and not the one with the unnatural and unattractive flat, white firmament.

Here is the way to picture clouds and skies as your eye sees them: load your camera with chromatic type or panchromatic film, and slip a yellow color filter on your lens. The diagram below shows how a yellow filter works. It preserves the sky tone, recording blue in the cor-

Color filters are traffic cops. A yellow filter (K-1 or K-2) stops part of the blue light, so that in the print, blue shows up as gray. Filters come in several colors, but a yellow K-1 or K-2 is what you want for general use.

responding shade of gray instead of white. Thus, the clouds and sky are more dramatically recorded and much is added to the appeal of your picture.

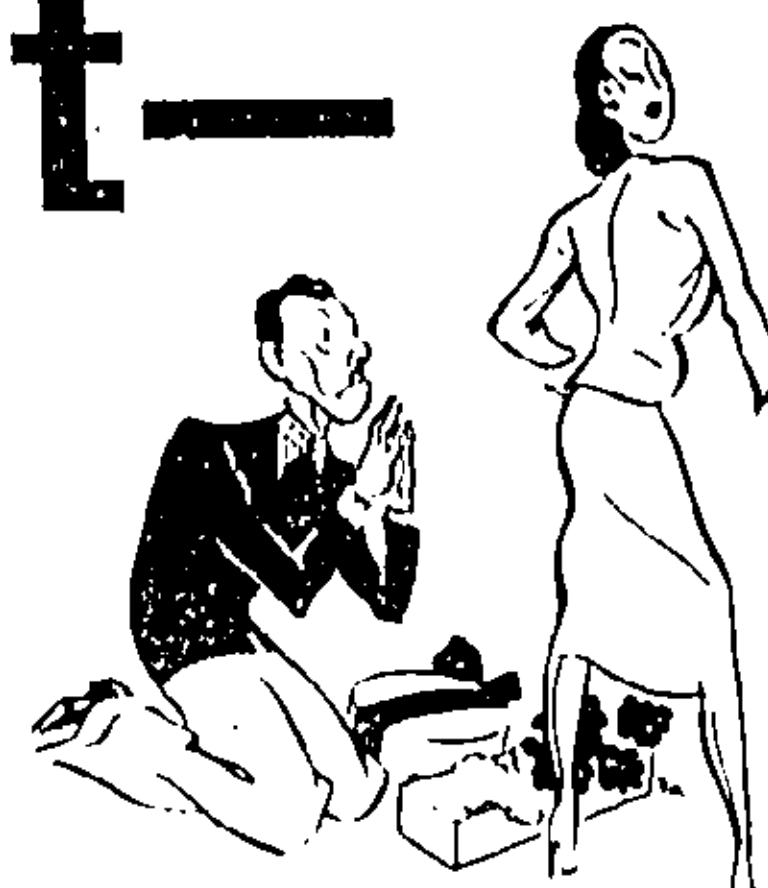

Summer clouds and skies are pictorial studies in themselves. They picture clouds alone—the different types of cirrus and cumulus; fair-day clouds and stormy-weather clouds. Use the sky and clouds as background for your pictures of people. Work them into your landscape views. They give your pictures reality, and a warm, summery feel. Use your filter for all such pictures. Increasing exposure according to the instructions that come with the filter or with the film you use.

Such practice pays rich snapshot dividends.

Why girls don't—

marry

I WENT out of my way to see the spinsters (horrid word!) when they were in town en masse a day or two ago. I went in search of physical characteristics that might provide an answer to the question, "Why don't girls marry?"

It was a fruitless search. Your typical spinster of a quarter of a century ago has all but disappeared.

A woman in frumpy clothes, with a scraggy neck, her hair in a bun, and steel-rimmed spectacles—that used to be the formula.

But all that is gone. The women who paraded in demand of pensions recently were trim and neat and cheerful.

The sort of women, you imagine, who manage their houses at the office most competently and are presented with a Westminster chiming clock when they leave to get married and bring up a family in a suburban villa.

Only these women don't leave to get married; and the nearest they get to bringing up a family is being Auntie Jane to friends' children.

Do they prefer life that way? There are in Britain 1,045,000 different answers to that question. For by this figure the female of the species is more numerous than the male.

And so long as this preponderance of female births continues and the monogamous system of marriage is upheld, the answers will go piling up. They pile up too much, are some of the answers from a representative bunch of unmarried women who say here what they think (with only their names suppressed, for reasons that are obvious).

First, Miss S. B., aged 42, attractive, a professional worker. She is genuinely grateful for a measure of emancipation that has made possible for some women an independence that is real, and that she means to keep. She is even grateful, in a way, to the war that hurried it along.

"(W)OMEN of my generation, you see, were between 20 and 30 then," she says. "And our world was upside down. Everybody's was, of course; but ours especially."

"I had a man friend. Not much more than that. And when he went to the front we had a sort of arrangement. Not quite an engagement. You know?"

"We wrote. You know the general level of suburbanites' letters? Not exactly exciting. Then, while he was abroad I got a job, well-paid and interesting. When he came back from France I just didn't want to give up my job."

"It would have meant living on his income smaller than mine and scraping along. And it's all very well to talk of the course of true love and all that, but missing the things you've been used to is as good a way as any of breaking up a marriage."

"So there wasn't any marriage. If anyone else had asked me and they haven't I should have given the same answer. I've enjoyed my freedom and I want it now more than ever I did."

"I've been lucky, of course. That's why I'm fairly happy now. Whether I shall be as cheerful in 20 years' time is another matter." Another matter that she is quite content not to worry much about just now. Miss B. intends to keep her freedom; and, for as long as she can, her job as research worker and her own flat in Bloomsbury.

But she admits, in quiet moments, that if the job became worth less and the flat in Bloomsbury a room in digs, the prospect would be less inviting.

The decision which Miss B., of Bloomsbury, made just after the war Miss E. M. F. reached after much consideration a couple of weeks ago; but in her case it was a different sort of decision.

Miss F. will get married just as soon as the right man comes along and pops the question. The man who went away so miserably as men do in these circumstances a couple of weeks ago manifestly was not the right one. Miss F. comes up by tram from Norbury to type from 9.30 to 6, for five days a week, in the classified advertisement department of a weekly newspaper in Fleet-street. For that she is paid £4 a week, which, for a girl of 25, is not a bad salary.

And, being a practical person, Miss F. does not intend to forsake that salary for marriage with a young man with an uncertain income that hovers around £3 a week. Heartless? Not a bit.

"Oh, I know the risk I'm taking. I want to get married. This job is interesting enough, but pounding a typewriter palls after a few years, however exciting the work."

"And at least I have had one offer of marriage. Many women would have jumped at that and done the worrying afterwards."

"I prefer to do my worrying this end. Thirty years ago, I suppose, I would not have had the chance. Thirty years on I'll tell you whether it was worth it."

That is Miss F. Now Miss I. B. is no less good to look at, no less efficient at her work. It is just her luck that she is five years older than Miss F., which lessens her chances. That she earns a pound a week less, which would make her more willing to risk marriage on a small income. And that she has not, to date, had even a chance to turn a man down.

This Miss B. lives in a house in a North London suburb with her mother and father and three more quite eligible sisters. She works in a big office, belongs to the local tennis club, is a good mixer. And she looks the competent sort of woman who could manage a home without trying to dominate it.

When she gets old is she going to become one of the frustrated, rather embittered women of the old time caricatures. From her conversation you would say not; but you never know, for she wants a home of her own that badly.

She skates easily over her particular problem now; but you know all the time that she seldom forgets it.

"Just bad luck, I suppose," she says. "Or else I'm particularly repulsive." Which isn't true. "But there it is. So long as there are surplus women you will have people like me making a nuisance of themselves."

"STILL, what can you do? Short of polygamy—which wouldn't attract me a bit, you will have to put up with us. And I suppose we should be grateful that in these days we can generally get a job of work to do instead of decorating the drawing room with our crochet."

There is another kind of woman doomed to spinsterhood: those who deliberately ignore every opportunity of marriage because of family ties—of invalid parents or younger brothers and sisters.

One of them is Miss T. Her mother is dead and her father so paralysed that he can only move himself, with the aid of a wheeled chair, a yard or two at a time.

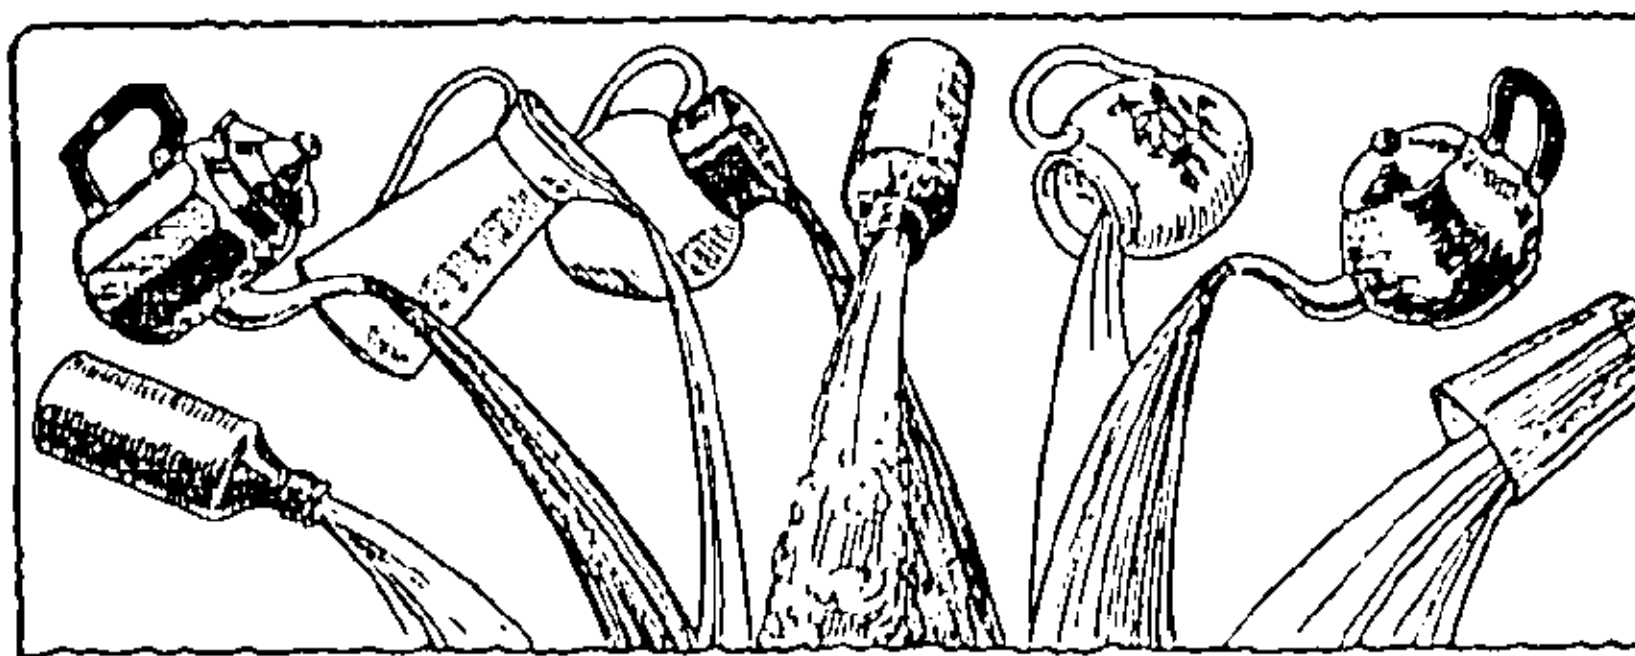

Miss T. stands behind the counter of an Oxford-street store for eight hours and then goes home in a packed train to housework enough to appal a woman with all day in which to do it.

She is 35 now. She has been doing this for 14 years. Outwardly, she admits to no sacrifice.

"It's just one of those things," she says.

And that is as good an answer as you will get.

Dear Kiddies,

Last week's cross-word was quite popular with the older entrants, but few entries were received from the Juniors. Perhaps it was a wee bit too difficult. Some of you went wrong with 18 Across: Pause between acts of play. This should have read "Interlude". 10 Down: Pertaining to 3 Down which was "Gives light at night" was also rather difficult. The answer was "Lunar".

The prize-winners this week are:—
Senior: Charles Edward Clark (aged 13), 10, Hillwood Road, Kowloon.

Intermediate: Penelope Jane Dodwell (aged 9½), 301, The Peak.

Junior: Nena Ozorio (aged 6), 289, Prince Edward Road.

Coupons have been sent to Charles, Penelope and Nena. I want you to bring these coupons to the "Hong-kong Telegraph" offices in Wyndham Street where they will be exchanged for money prizes.

Specially commended for good work are the following:

Seniors: Nancy Dion, Geoffrey Hazel Slater, Eddie Xavier, Ethel Chue, Mary Grace Asche, Dulce Barradas, Hamedah el Arculli, Terence Barton, Stephen Mose.

Intermediate: John Hardoon, Claude Coom, Ghazi J. Khan, Ann Hunter, A. C. Kader, Teresa Souza, Robert Sousa, Alexandre Barradas.

This week, we are having a jumbled names competition. The puzzle to be solved is one of jumbled names of drinks—tea, coffee and so on. The names are to be found in the mixed letters under the picture.

When you discover them, write the name, in ink or pencil, in a neat numbered list. Write as nicely as you can, because writing and neatness are taken into account.

Be careful to put your name, age and address on the card and remember that the competition closes at 4 p.m. on Wednesday. Send your entries to Uncle Eddie, c/o "Hong-kong Telegraph," Wyndham Street.

Three prizes will be given in order of merit for the correct and best-written entries.
Lots of luck, kiddies.

Nabul, who had taken the stamp, had (naturally) not bothered to read the account of it circulated in the papers. In writing out his description, he gave the number of perforations correctly.

"Don't scold him, Mrs. Hardy. He doesn't look well. Are you sure he is not constipated? Whenever a child is cross and peevish, I look at the tongue. If it is coated, or if the breath is disagreeable, I know at once what is wrong. I always give 'California Syrup of Figs.' That moves the bowels in a few hours and cleanses the system."

"Children don't understand the importance of regularity. They get absorbed in play and won't trouble. And it is only when they get thoroughly cross and miserable that you realize that they are constipated. I find it saves a world of sickness and worry to give them a regular weekly dose. I would do that if I were you. With a natural laxative like 'California Syrup of Figs' you can't go wrong."

"Doctors recommend it and give it to their own children, and we nurses swear by it. Get a bottle of 'California Syrup of Figs' from the drug store and give him a dose at bedtime. He'll be as happy as a lark in the morning."

"Never experiment with cheap and drastic preparations when buying children's laxatives. The safest plan is to do as I do, follow the example of the doctors and give 'California Syrup of Figs.'"

Chaplin Defence Opens At Old Bailey

CASSERLEY DREW REVOLVER, SAYS K. C.

Death Struggle Described In Villa Lounge

"Chaplin's Pitiful Stratagems"

—Mr. Birkett

"Casserley drew a revolver. There was a struggle as Chaplin tried to force him to drop it. The revolver went off, wounding Casserley in the neck. They fell. The revolver, still held by Casserley, went off again."

This, in substance, was the story told by Mr. Norman Birkett, K.C., at the Old Bailey recently to describe how Percy Arthur Casserley (58), retired managing director, was killed in the lounge of his villa in Lindisfarne Road, Wimbledon.

Mr. Birkett was making his speech in defence of Edward Royal Chaplin, 35-year-old builder's foreman, of Abbotshury Road, Morden, who is accused of murdering Casserley.

After reminding the jury that their decision concerned the fate of a fellow creature, Mr. Birkett said in his speech:

"Largely owing to the folly of the prisoner himself he finds himself in the gravest jeopardy."

"It was not until April 30 that he ever made public acknowledgment that he was at the house that night. Up to that moment, subterfuge, stratagem—to use the plain words, lies."

"You will not convict a man of murder or of anything else because of folly, because of foolish and pitiful stratagems and devices."

SANCTITY OF HOME LIFE

"Was it a premeditated murder or not? The deceased man, with whose death this man stands charged, was the husband of the woman with whom he had had an intrigue."

"It is said, and I want to deal with it, that the husband stood in the way. That is the kind of thought and idea which permeates into the mind—let him be got rid of. It will not bear examination for a moment."

"It is not for me to excuse that which I have termed intrigue. What ever our private view may be about matters of that kind—the sanctity of home life is not the first time that kind of intrigue has occurred, and it will not be the last."

Speaking of the evidence that Mr. Casserley was seriously addicted to drink, Mr. Birkett said it did not tend to make a very happy household."

"When Mr. Chaplin came along," Mr. Birkett continued, "and the friendship began to ripen, and to ripen, and to ripen, it did not seem at that time that they were doing a very grievous wrong."

THERE WAS A STRUGGLE

"Look at the case for the prosecution. Did you ever hear of a murder being committed by a pistol when it was first necessary to take a blood-vengeance?"

"There can be no gainsaying that for some reason or other, there was a struggle. I say that kills completely any theory of premeditated murder."

Mr. Birkett said there was one vitally important factor. The pistol, the bullet from which caused the death of Mr. Casserley, was not the pistol of the prisoner. It was the pistol of Mr. Casserley himself.

Counsel proceeded to explain that Chaplin entered the lounge that night to tell Mr. Casserley that he was the father of the child that was about to be born. The situation was bound soon to arise.

The suggestion that he was carrying a life-preserver was fantastic. Mr. Chaplin went to the house never anticipating that even an interview would take place.

"He will tell you," Mr. Birkett said, "that there came a strange quiet early when Mr. Casserley himself took that revolver from the second drawer of the bureau."

"Mr. Casserley drew a revolver, and it was simply and solely because of that that Mr. Chaplin exercised forcible restraint upon him."

"He will tell you how he endeavoured to push the revolver about the head, how it dropped to the floor, how there was stooping to pick up the revolver from where it had fallen."

He would tell them how, in an attempt to push it up to force Mr. Casserley to drop it behind his back, the revolver went off. He did not know the bullet went through the side of the neck. He thought it went into the ceiling. That was the first shot.

He would tell them that Mr. Casserley had his back to the bureau and Chaplin was facing him. They would hear that Casserley clutched Mr. Chaplin, causing him intense pain.

Seeing Mr. Casserley's torch on the bureau, he took it and struck at the back of the head. The wounds upon the head were caused by Chaplin when he was being in that way attacked by Mr. Casserley.

In the struggle, they fell. The jury would hear about clicks and about misfiring. The pistol was in the hands of Mr. Casserley, and the bullet went into the place indicated by Sir Bernard Spilsbury. No doubt,

Judge Corrects His Lawyer Son

When Mr. Christmas Humphreys, who is prosecuting with Mr. G. B. McClure, suggested to a medical witness, that certain blood spots were "definitely" not in a straight line, he was corrected by his father, the judge.

Mr. Justice Humphreys said to his son: "Everybody says 'definitely' when they don't mean it."

Mr. Humphreys accepted the correction and amended his question accordingly.

Death the safety catch and down inside the left butt-plate.

The presence of oil made it unsafe for him to say to which group the blood belonged.

STAINS INSIDE REVOLVER

Dr. Thomas said there were smears of blood on the torch consistent with the torch having been wiped across some bloodstained surface. It was of the same group as that of the dead man.

There was no blood on the outside rim, which would be the first part affected if the torch was used to strike anything.

The life-preserver also bore a trace of blood on the outside of the webbing. This was also of the same group as the dead man. He thought the webbing had been washed.

Dr. Thomas added that there was a sign of a bloodstained hand on the corner.

Mr. Birkett asked Dr. Thomas if it was not very difficult to determine the age of blood, supposing the examination took place two days after it had been shed.

Dr. Thomas said that for accuracy in hours that was so.

Is it right to say that "O" and "A" are the commonest groups in which mankind can be grouped?—That is so.

And that almost every other person is either "O" or "A"?—Even more than that.

The other two groups are very much less common?—That is so.

Dealing with the rubric, Mr. Birkett suggested that on the right breast there had been a bloodstain of some size, which had apparently been wiped or washed.

Dr. Thomas: I am quite certain there was no bloodstain of any large size there.

Dr. Thomas agreed that when he said reaction for blood he could not possibly say that it was blood.

There were no hairs on the torch, the witness said.

When Dr. Thomas said the blood on the life-preserver belonged to Group "A," Mr. Birkett said: That is a common group. It does not follow that it is the blood of the dead man.

"By no means," Dr. Thomas replied.

Dr. Thomas, re-examined by Mr. McClure, said that if the torch had inflicted head injuries he would have expected it to be covered with blood and to find hairs attached to it.

"PISTOL PRESSED AGAINST SKIN"

Sir Bernard Spilsbury described a post-mortem examination of the body:

"It was clear," he said, "that the weapon had been held with the muzzle pressed very firmly against the skin and held firmly in position while the weapon was discharged, so that everything escaping from the muzzle passed at once into the skin, including the smoke and the bullet itself."

There was a wound at the back of the neck where a bullet had passed just beneath the skin, and in this case, he thought, the pistol must have been discharged at least six inches from the wound.

Picking up a life-preserver, Sir Bernard said it could have caused injuries on the top of the head if the larger rounded end had been the striking surface. The amount of force must have been very considerable.

MR. BIRKETT MAKES A PROTEST

Sir Bernard was asked from what direction, in his opinion, the blows to the head were delivered. He said by a blow from behind.

He was continuing: "I think probably he was attacked when standing," when Mr. Birkett rose and said: "It is not within his province to speak of an attack. This is a matter which is being investigated."

Mr. Birkett said that while he had the greatest respect for Sir Bernard as a medical witness, was not this "rather embarking upon a reconstruction of a crime in which he has no special knowledge as distinct from any other person?"

The Judge: What phrase do you suggest he should use? "Somebody who hit him?" You object to the person being called "an attacker?"

Mr. Birkett: I must certainly object to the word "attacker." It is the whole point of the defence here.

The Judge: Do you object to the word assailant?

Mr. Birkett: I do indeed, sir. The Judge then suggested the use of the phrase "the individual who caused the injury" and turned to Sir Bernard, who said "I think that it is splitting hairs."

NOT CAUSED BY A FALL

Sir Bernard said that what he wished to say, was that the wounds were not caused by Mr. Casserley falling or in any way striking himself. There were a number of injuries to the head and face, but they were less severe. They included a bruising on the upper part of the left eyelid, which might, in ordinary language, be called a black eye.

All the bruises were consistent with a struggle of some sort, Sir Bernard added.

Mr. Birkett, cross-examining, suggested to Sir Bernard Spilsbury that it was impossible for Mr. Casserley to be near the hole in the wall when the bullet was discharged, and that it was more probable that he was standing near the bureau.

A MATHEMATICAL PROBLEM

Sir Bernard said that in his view that was impossible.

Mr. Justice Humphreys: I think this is a mathematical problem.

Mr. Birkett, who agreed, said to Sir Bernard: "You know Mr. Temple Grey?"

Sir Bernard nodded.

Mr. Birkett continued: "You know Mr. Temple Grey to be a medical man of high standing. If he has, in fact, worked this matter out and says the situation I am putting to you is really the only possible one, what would you say to that?"

Sir Bernard: I am afraid, unless he could prove it by diagram, I should not agree.

Mr. Birkett: That is exactly what he has done.

Sir Bernard said it was quite clear that the skull of Mr. Casserley was not fractured.

Mr. Birkett: A man may have his skull fractured by blows in many places, but still be perfectly conscious?—Yes.

MAY FAIR HOTEL CASE CALLED

Mr. Birkett recalled the May Fair Hotel case, when, he said, a jeweller had his skull fractured in many places and remained alert and struggling.

He was not aware of that," Sir Bernard said.

Mr. Birkett: The blows in this case, which produced these lacerated wounds, if they had been inflicted with the life-preserver or the torch, would have fractured the skull?—Yes.

Sir Bernard said the bruising on the face and forearms was indicative of a struggle.

Saw Bridesmaid Ablaze, Rolling on Floor

PHOTOGRAPHER'S STORY

Mr. John Gillespie Clayton, Coventry photographer, in whose studio two bridesmaids received burns which caused their deaths, collapsed while giving evidence at the inquest recently. He rested a few minutes before being able to continue his story.

The fire, which was on April 23, broke out after the dress of one of the girls in a wedding party had touched an electric heater. The girls who died were six-year-old Josephine Mary Russell and Eunice Naylor, aged twenty-three.

The bride (now Mrs. Charles Mitchell) and two other bridesmaids Miss Leonie Kendall and Miss Josephine Hollier are still in hospital. Mrs. Mitchell is still unaware of the deaths of the two bridesmaids.

"PANDEMONIUM"

Mr. Clayton was about to photograph the group when he heard a scream. He told the coroner (Mr. C. W. Hildes).

"I looked round, saw a flame leap from the back of Miss Naylor's dress, and was momentarily stunned. I didn't know what to do."

There was pandemonium. The flames simply leapt from one dress to another. It was not a normal flame. . . . Believe me, it was not a normal flame.

It was at this point that Mr. Clayton broke down. When he had recovered, he continued:—"I flicked a flame off the child's back with the tips of my fingers, and then saw another girl rolling on the floor tearing at her frock."

"It was a sight I shall never forget."

WAR VICTIM REGAINS MEMORY AFTER 20 YRS.

Lille.
THE hospitals where more or less permanent victims of the world war are cared for have provided many strange stories, but few stranger than that of Henri Pelat, mobilized with the 1st French Infantry Regiment on the outbreak of war.

The call came to Pelat at the wedding feast following his marriage to Renee Folin. So instead of setting out, as planned, on the honeymoon trip to England, the couple were obliged to separate, and within an hour of the end of the banquet Pelat was with his regiment.

In the subsequent chaos following the German invasion of Northern France, the bride was lost amid the crowds of refugees and letters from Pelat.

During his periods on leave or in hospital recovering from wounds, the soldier tried to get news of his lost bride, but without success.

Towards the close of the war he passed into hospital, a victim of shell shock, suffering from complete loss of memory, not knowing his name, regiment or anything about himself. For twenty years he continued in that state.

On May Day, however, he and other victims were taken to the cinema by an organisation looking after such cases, and in the news section there were shown scenes in Lille. Suddenly Pelat became excited, and showed that the scenes shown were not strange to him.

Everything had come back through seeing pictures of his home town, and particularly the shop kept by his parents in one of the main streets, where he had assisted his father up to his mobilisation.

The recovery, remarkable as it was, was so convincing that the authorities arranged to confront Pelat with the people he claimed as parents.

No sooner did they meet than the parents recognised the long lost son, given up for dead, with his name figuring on the local war memorial.

But there was another surprise for the man whose memory had come back. With his parents had come his "widow," who had remained true to his memory and after the first shock of reunion with his parents the "widow" was brought into the ward.

Identity having been established beyond doubt, the military authorities will take the necessary steps to have the "dead" man brought back to life officially, and to enable him to make the long-deferred honeymoon trip he has been furnished with emergency papers showing that he is Henri Pelat, born 1894, "killed" by error 1918; rehabilitated 1938.

Swift suppression of the rebel Ilon of General Saturnino Cedillo and his peasant army was reported by President Lazaro Cardenas from San Luis Potosi, Mex., by Federal troops. Above, Federal soldiers guard arms given up by Insurrectionists, who were offered amnesty. These rifles are said to be of German and Japanese make.

Courtesy Cops—for the Jay-walkers

(By W. A. McKENZIE)

Courtesy Cops for pedestrians is the latest move in the Home Office war on street accidents.

Special "infantry" courtesy cops, distinctly uniformed, working in groups at the chief danger spots, will, under a scheme which is now under consideration, take up their duties in London shortly.

They will watch the conduct of their charges, pounce on offenders, and politely, but firmly, point out to them how they might have caused an accident, to themselves or to others.

Practices that will call for a gentle reproof will include:

Ignoring pedestrian crossings; Stepping on to crossings without looking; and Walking from behind stationary vehicles.

Drivers and cyclists who do not observe the regulations about pedestrian crossings, light-controlled crossings, and vehicle stopping-places, or who take unnecessary risks, will also be stopped and lectured.

Preliminary steps have already been taken and, if it is finally approved, the scheme will start in a few weeks. It has already proved a success in Paris.

The motoring "courtesy cops" are to be tried out for 12 months, and if the experiment is successful a national corps will be instituted.

The infantry "courtesy cops" will be tried out for three months. The scheme has been conceived as the result of the Ministry's analysis of accidents, which showed that the greater number were due to carelessness and recklessness on the part of pedestrians and drivers.

Meanwhile the Minister of Transport is considering the advisability of making the pedestrian crossings compulsory.

WHAT DOES THE X-RAY SHOW ?

Tooth decay sometimes works under cover. The X-ray frequently discloses teeth badly infected below the gum line, which sap strength and even lead to serious diseases.

You must fight acid every time you brush your teeth! Germ Acids, forming from fermenting food particles, are the principal cause of tooth decay. You can fight them scientifically by brushing your teeth at least twice daily with Squibb Dental Cream. It is antacid and neutralizes Germ Acids.

Squibb Dental Cream contains nothing to scratch enamel or irritate gums... it protects and purifies as it cleans. And it costs no more than ordinary dentifrices.

ITALY NOW HAS 6,000 WARPLANES

All With Home-Produced Engines

Behind the bayonet-barricade of Italy's conscript army Benito Mussolini has built an air fleet conservatively estimated at 6,000 or more machines.

More important than the number of planes is the fact that the Duce has driven Italian industry to accomplish the impossible, states the Evening Standard Rome correspondent.

There is not one single non-Italian engine in a fighting aircraft bearing the tricolor rudder emblem.
Italian production lines, despite handicaps such as a scarcity of raw materials, turn out one motor per day per factory, and there are at least six factories working around the clock producing aeroplane engines.

The only remaining foreign engines
in operation are mounted on about 60 Alfa Romeo civilian aircraft. These will be replaced as soon as they wear out by Italian motors.

£7,000 EACH
Cost of the average Italian bomber is approximately £7,000. Aluminium is abundant and cheap in Italy. So is linen fabric. On the whole, Italian warplanes of all categories except the new, fast, all-metal pursuit craft, are of mixed wood, alloy, fabric construction. Labour is cheap.

An American first-rank bomber costs £50,000. The Italian bomber is built for Italy's specific needs. A maximum radius of 600 miles carrying one ton of bombs is all that is required. So they build them fast and cheap.

The Italians train a good pilot for about £400. The Italian pilot takes an S-81 bomber, worth about 750,000
lire or less, into the skies after flying as little as 100 hours solo.

Consequently, Italy has to-day
approximately 8,000 class A pilots about 2,000 second string pilots and a reserve of at least 4,000.

Italy's ability to produce home-made motors for aircraft, tanks and transport vehicles is considered for more important a factor in estimating Fascist fighting strength than the imposing total of 2,700 bombers which the Duce can order into action at an instant's notice.

THE VITAL POINT

He can press a little green button on his desk and mobilise immediately in addition a fast-line craft and about 780 reserves.

But the really vital point, air and military experts insist, is that Italy has built up an aircraft industry capable of rapid production—for so long as raw materials can come into the country or supplies on hand can last —independently of the rest of the world.

The best reliable information about
Italian air-strength in Libya and East Africa is vague, but places the total strength in Tripolitania at about 600 craft with 475 machines in Ethiopia, making a total for these colonies of 1,075, only about 20 per cent. of which are latest model front-line fighters.

Summing up Italy's aerial power one obtains the startling figure of 6,125 fighting aircraft of all classes, ages and categories. Cut that figure by half and Italy still has a formidable air force.

Military and air attaches in close touch with the Italian situation think the figure is conservative. They base this opinion on the fact that secrecy marks every single phase of Italian aircraft production.

Police Fire On Tribe

Mombasa.
Fighting broke out between tribal factions at Mombasa, near Lake Victoria Nyanza, Tanganyika, over rival claims to the chieftaincy of the tribe.

A police detachment were faced by warriors in murderous frame of mind and the district officer had to give the order to fire.

Eight negroes were wounded. Two of them later died.

Old Harrovian Peer Tells Of School 'Squalor'

Old Harrovian Lord Rayford told the House of Lords
recently:

"I was at one of our great public schools, and when I think of the forms we used to sit on we were living in absolute squalor compared with the village child of to-day."

"I want to see the children well housed and have decent conditions in their schools, but are we not overdoing it?"

Wife Strikes Her Rival

A WOMAN who was stated to have attacked another woman with a truncheon belonging to her husband, an ex-policeman, was bound over for 12 months at Leighton Buzzard.

Defending Mrs. Lillie Turner, of Leighton Buzzard, who was accused of causing bodily harm to Mrs. Ellen Moore, Mr. W. G. W. Willis said that in France a plea of "crime passionnel" would have been entered.

Mrs. Moore said in evidence that Mrs. Turner brandished a truncheon and rained blows on her. She screamed, and another woman came up, but did not help her. She had to have medical attention every day for a fortnight. Mrs. Moore denied associating with Mrs. Turner.

MEANT TO USE TRUNCHEON

Mr. Willis: You told her that she had got a police truncheon which you would make her give up, and that you had something better than a truncheon for her?—No.

Have you been in the habit of walking about with something to "protect" you?—No.

Mrs. Turner stated in evidence that on one occasion she found her husband under a bed and Mrs. Moore in a cupboard.

Mr. F. W. Latham, prosecuting:
You took the truncheon out for the deliberate purpose of hitting Mrs.
Moore?—Certainly.

Mr. Willis, pleading for lenience, said Mrs. Turner had been greatly provoked. She had carried on for some years under scorn and contempt through her husband's infatuation for another woman.

Knock out that STOMACH ACIDITY

Stomach acidity is a dangerous enemy to health. It is caused by over-eating or drinking—too many late hours, over-work, or over-indulgence. When you have an Excess Acid condition, you become an easy prey for Headaches, Colds, Rheumatic aches and pains, Stomach Disorders, and many other common, everyday ailments that cause you much suffering and discomfort. This is just why

Alka-Seltzer

has been such a sensation among millions of sufferers. Medical authorities agree that most everyday pains and distresses are caused by excess acid in the system. In headache, indigestion, wind, heartburn, colds, neuralgia and rheumatic pains you usually have a two-fold attack—both pain and distress.
ALKA-SELTZER, two-fold in its wonderful action, relieves these two things, in a hurry. Both pain and distress disappear.

Just dissolve one or two tablets of ALKA-SELT-ZER in glass of water, and drink it. You will feel a relief you never before experienced, or perhaps never believed possible. It is not a laxative. You can take it as often as you like without inconvenience.

DON BUDGE GIVES AUSTIN A SEVERE THRASHING WINS TITLE AT WIMBLEDON A SECOND TIME

SWEEPS ENGLISHMAN OFF COURT IN EARLY STAGES

Playing superlative tennis, Donald Budge of America won the Wimbledon men's title for the second year in succession by beating H. W. Austin in straight sets in the final yesterday.

A crowd of 20,000 spectators packed the centre court to see the Californian administer one of the most severe thrashings to Austin in the history of Wimbledon finals.

Not only did Budge carry off the title, but he also became the first player in history not to lose a single set in the entire tournament. He thus becomes the first American since the hey-day of "Big" Bill Tilden to win the Wimbledon championship twice in succession.

Throughout the 1938 tournament, Budge conceded only 48 games.

According to United Press, the American virtually swept Austin off the courts in the first two sets, which he won with the loss of only one game. He then relaxed in the third. When he was leading 4-3 the match was interrupted by rain and there was a delay of 40 minutes.

AUSTIN OUTPLAYED

When the match resumed, Budge again attacked savagely. Completely outplayed, Austin was sometimes so glib that some of his countrymen groaned at the one-sidedness of the encounter.

Austin was often aided by Budge's terrific service, and the American's backhand and sharp volleys worked with almost unbelievable accuracy. His drives and "smoked" placements were so deep and so accurately angled that they often "choked" the lines. Before the match, Austin announced that he would retire after the present tournament.

At the end of the game, Austin paid the American conqueror tribute by carrying his rackets, shoes and sweaters off the court as an acknowledgment of victory.

Donald Budge was called to the Royal Box and shook hands with Her Majesty Queen Mary and Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Kent.

Interviewed after the match, Budge said, "I feel that I played the best game of my life. Everything went right at the same time. I don't think Bunny was in top form. He had many worries about his wife and baby."

Austin's wife, the well-known actress Phyllis Konstam, gave birth to a daughter in the course of the tournament.

NO VACANT SEAT

Describing the match, Trans-Ocean said it was a one-sided affair. When Budge and Austin stepped on to the Centre Court, the grandstand did not show a single vacant seat. Amongst those watching the game were Queen Mary, Princess Elizabeth, Princess Mary Rose, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, and the former Queen of Spain.

From the very first few strokes, it was evident that Austin had no chance against Budge, whose powerful service, drives, smashes and well-placed volleys left Austin a spectator.

The American won the first set in 20 minutes, the second set in 16 minutes, losing only a single game in these two sets.

OTHER MATCHES

The new German combination of Henner Henkel and G. von Metaxa entered the men's doubles final by overcoming the Yugoslavian pair Kukuljevic and Pallada by 7-5, 6-3, 6-4.

According to Trans-Ocean, Kukuljevic and Pallada, of Yugoslavia, put up stiff resistance but the Germans, Henkel and von Metaxa, were clearly the better pair. Henkel and Metaxa will now meet Budge and Maiko, the holders, in the final.

Donald Budge entered another final when he and Miss Alice Marble, with whom he holds the mixed doubles title, defeated Ronald Shykes and Miss Joan Saunders in the semi-final by 6-4, 6-2.

The British players were outclassed by the Americans Budge again was playing perfect tennis. The Anglo-Argentinean combination of Miss Freda James and H. D. Russell made a gallant attempt in the other semi-final match against Henner Henkel and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, but were defeated in three sets.

In the semi-finals of the women's doubles, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan and Miss Alice Marble, of America, eliminated Mrs. Helene Miller and Miss Margaret Morpheu 7-5, 6-4. Madame Mathieu (France) and Miss A. M. Yorks (England), holders of the women's doubles title and recent winners in the French Championships, earned the right to meet Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Marble by beating Mrs. Andrus and Madame Henrotin (France) by 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

The following were the results at Wimbledon:

MEN'S SINGLES (FINAL)

Donald Budge (America) beat H. W. Austin (England) 6-1, 6-0, 6-3.

MEN'S DOUBLES (SEMI-FINALS)

Henner Henkel and G. von Metaxa (Germany) beat Kukuljevic and Pallada (Yugoslavia) 7-5, 6-2, 6-4.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES (SEMI-FINALS)

Madame Mathieu (France) and Miss A. M. Yorks (England) beat Mrs. Andrus and Madame Henrotin (France) 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan and Miss Alice Marble (America) beat Mrs. Helene Miller and Miss Margaret Morpheu (South Africa) 7-5, 6-4.

MIXED DOUBLES (SEMI-FINALS)

Don Budge and Miss Alice Marble (America) beat Ronald Shykes and Miss Joan Saunders (England) 6-4, 6-2.

Henner Henkel (Germany) and Mrs. Fabyan (America) beat H. D. Russell (Argentine) and Miss Freda James (England) 6-3, 1-6, 6-3.

DEFEATS MRS. MOODY—Miss Mary Ruth Hardwick, 24-year-old English girl, who brought this season's first set-back to Mrs. Hellen Willis Moody, American tennis player, by defeating her in St. George's Hill tennis tournament at Weybridge, England. Miss Hardwick, England's second ranking player, almost defeated Mrs. Moody in 1935.

BOWLS LEAGUE PROGRAMME

Several interesting matches are down for decision in the Hongkong Lawn Bowls League this afternoon, particularly in the First Division where competition has become extremely keen.

Club de Recreio, last year's champions, seem to have completely recovered from their bad start. A series of victories has taken them to the top of the table, and to-day they will be tested by Kowloon Docks at King's Park. A victory for the Portuguese is indicated.

On the other hand, the Craigengower C.C. have not done so well of late. They visit their neighbours, the Police R.C., and do not seem to be very confident of the outcome. Their matches against the guardians of the peace have always been very close, and it is likely that to-day's match will be no exception.

One of the best ties of the day should be seen at Sookunpoo where the Indians entertain the Civil Servants. The two teams are at the bottom of the League Table, with the Indians having an advantage of three points. If the Indians win to-day, they beat the Civil Servants at Happy Valley earlier in the season—they will probably avoid relegation, but a defeat for them will make the position more than ordinarily interesting; for then, they will be only one point ahead of the Civil Servants and there are several more matches to be played.

The following is the programme to-day:

FIRST DIVISION
Police R. C. v Craigengower C. C.
Kowloon B. G. C. v Kowloon C. C.

The United States, as holders of the Davis Cup, were strongly against the proposition.—Trans-Ocean.

AMERICANS SUCCEED AT HENLEY

London, July 1. Kent School of America beat St. John's College, Oxford, by one length in the Thames Cup at the Henley Regatta to-day, thus earning the right to meet their fellow-Americans, Yale University, in the semi-final.

In the Stewards' Cup, the Leander Rowing Club, the holders, beat London by four lengths in 7 mins. 47 secs.

In the Diamond Sculls, the American, J. Burk, continued his winning way, beating Tyler (Thames) easily in 9 mins.

Pembroke College, Cambridge, were successful in the Ladies' Plate, beating Eton by one length in 7 mins. 32 secs.

In the semi-finals of the Stewards' Cup, Trinity College, Oxford, beat Thames by three quarters of a length in 7 mins. 39 secs.

Third Trinity of Cambridge beat Brasenose of Oxford by two lengths in 7 mins. 53 secs. in the Visitors' Cup.—Reuter.

TEST CRICKETERS PERFORM WELL IN COUNTY MATCHES

Centuries By Paynter And Joe Hardstaff

London, July 1. The three county cricket championship matches which went into the third day ended in victories for Lancashire, Yorkshire and Somerset.

Features of the matches were the fine batting of Eddie Paynter, who scored 122 for Lancashire against Somerset, and the fine bowling of Bill Bowes, who took five wickets for 35 runs for Yorkshire against Worcester.

LANCASHIRE v. HAMPSHIRE
At Manchester, Lancashire defeated Hampshire easily by ten wickets. Lancashire totalled 293 in their first innings, Eddie Paynter, the Test cricketer, scoring 122.

In reply, Hampshire scored 120 (Pollard 7 for 55). Forced to follow-on, Hampshire were again dismissed cheaply, this time scoring 180.

Lancashire easily made 22 runs without loss to win by ten wickets.

WORCESTER v. YORKSHIRE
At Worcester, Yorkshire defeated Worcestershire by an innings and 18 runs.

Yorkshire declared at 359 for nine wickets in their only visit to the batting crease, while Worcesters made 113 (Bowes 5 for 33) and 223.

NOTTS v. SOMERSET
At Nottingham, Somerset defeated Notts by one wicket.

Notts scored 232 (Hardstaff 114) and 227, while Somerset made 230 (Woodhead 5 for 49) and 224 for nine wickets (Gunn 5 for 74).—Reuter.

CHINESE PLAYERS BEATEN

London, July 1. Miss Gem Hoang of China made her exit from the Ladies' Plate at Wimbledon to-day after a gallant showing against Miss Dorothy Stevenson, the Australian Championship finalist, in the semi-final.

The Chinese girl's short reach was a great disadvantage but she fought pluckily, keeping a fine length throughout, although she took some little time to settle down.

She dropped the first set after ten games, but recovered to take the second with the loss of three games.

In the final set, Miss Stevenson led 5-0, but Miss Hoang pulled up to 3-5. In the ninth game she saved four match points before losing.

CHOY RETIRES

In the quarter-final of the Wimbledon Plate, D. W. Butler defeated W. C. Choy of China 6-4. The Chinese player retired after one set, not wishing to play any more.—Reuter.

IT'S SOUND PUTTING THAT COUNTS

Yates Proves it in Big Golf Final

By F. J. C. Pignon

Troon, May 29.

Charles R. Yates, a sturdy twenty-four-years old golfer from Atlanta, Georgia, a member of the United States Walker Cup Team, to-day won the British Amateur Championship here, on Troon Links, in a rather disappointing climax to a great meeting.

Yates beat Cecil Ewing, of County Sligo, Ireland, a sturdy, bespectacled golfer, 27 years of age, by 3 and 2, and while, as a match, it was well contested, it was too grim to be inspiring, and there were too many disappointing moments for the huge crowd.

One could not help thinking that Ewing should have won. He would have done so had he not left himself with missable putts of about two yards and frequently failed to hole them.

Ewing for the most part was the equal, and frequently the superior, of Yates, but his approach play and putting were lamentable by comparison with what has been seen here during the week.

The futility of expecting to win matches with an approach and two putts was never more conclusively proved.

Yates won with courage and amazingly good putting. I have never seen a more deadly putter. Using a rusty club with a hickory shaft wrapped in a series of untidy bandages and whipping, and having no grip to it, Yates during the week rarely failed to hole out in two from 20 yards and was usually "dead" when about two yards from the hole.

"MIGHT HAVE BEEN"
His putting to-day, however, was nothing remarkable. Judged by the standard of his earlier efforts it was poor, because he did not hole a single long putt, and missed several from less than 6ft. However, Ewing missed more of these than did the American, and that, briefly, is why Yates won.

It was a sorry story of what might have been. Ewing started perfectly with four 4's and led by two holes, but instead of ramming home his advantage Ewing began putting lapses. He lost the short 5th through taking three putts, and failed to hole a 4ft. putt to win the 9th.

Ewing was again two up at the 10th, where Yates went exploring the rough, but lost the 12th, where his mashie was bunkered. Then with a three at the 14th Yates squared the match.

Again Ewing took the lead with a wellplayed 15th, and threw away the advantage by going into the burn at the 16th, and for the first time in the match Yates took the lead at the short 17th, Ewing being bunkered.

CHANCE MISSED
Ewing had a chance to finish the round all square, for he played one of the best shots of the match to the home green, laid the ball 4ft. from the pin, and missed the putt for a winning three. Yates was round in par 74 against 75.

Ewing holed a putt of 10 yards to square the match at the 19th, but then took three putts from the same distance at the next hole, saved himself with a stytle at the third, played the fourth badly, and again took three putts at the fifth.

After that he settled down to the best golf of the day, to finish with a putt of about 7ft. for a "birdie" four.

U.S.A. Tennis Players Still Supreme

By Frank Foxon

London, June 2.

The Stars and Stripes are waving brightly over the sylvan glades of the West Side Country Club at Weybridge—the prettiest lawn tennis courts in the country.

The Americans are supreme and I think they will go on being supreme. Number one is Mrs. Moody, who always wins and never has to try. The impression I always get of Mrs. Moody is that she has got a lot in reserve. I always get a sense of tranquillity way with that immobile face of hers and in her right hand she carries a racket which is devastating. She did not play mercifully yesterday against Miss Piercey, of South Africa, but her victory was always completely sure. She won at 6-2, 6-0.

She is being well backed up by Miss Dorothy Bundy, who beat that steady player, Mrs. E. C. Peters, 6-4, 7-5. There is a streak of carelessness in Miss Bundy's play, but when she concentrates she is very good indeed.

THE BIG DANGER

To-day Mrs. Moody plays Miss Mary Hardwick. The only possible danger to the American in this tournament is Miss Jedzewska. Yesterday the Polish girl hit with fierce intensity while beating Miss Morpheus, of South Africa, 6-1, 6-4. Miss Jedzewska would be a world beater if she had more assets than her drive. She lacks versatility.

The men's singles still failed to attract interest, but D. McPhail played well while beating R. Wetherall, 6-2, 6-2. McPhail drove with great accuracy on both wings, but he lacks the ability to become a Davis Cup player. He is good—but there are so many British players who are good and not great.

(Mrs. Moody, contrary to expectations, was defeated by Miss Hardwick.)

DARING BURGLARY ON PEAK

One of the most daring burglaries in recent months was carried out at 400 The Peak, residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. McLay, between 4 and 4.30 o'clock this morning.

Entering the window of a bedroom occupied by Miss Mignon McLay, the burglar succeeded in ransacking the house of jewellery valued at $1,015 before "Bungchi," Mrs. McLay's wire-haired terrier, raised the alarm.

The barking of the dog roused Mr. McLay, but by this time the burglar had decamped, making the exit through a dining room window.

Practically all of Miss McLay's jewellery was stolen, including brooches, rings, pendants and bracelets.

Miss McLay slept throughout the time the burglar was in her room, and was not awakened until after he had made his escape.

Showing great audacity, the burglar entered the bedroom occupied by Mr. McLay, who is manager of the National City Bank in Hongkong, and crept up to a small table besides his bed. From this table the burglar took a wristlet watch owned by Mr. McLay.

It is believed that the robbery was carefully planned, and that the burglar must have had some knowledge of the lay-out of the house and its fittings.

He gained entrance into Miss McLay's bedroom by climbing up a water-pipe just beside her window. Before entering he completed his plans for leaving with his loot.

Police state that they are searching for two men in connection with the incident.

All day, the booming of artillery was audible in the western area, indicating that the Japanese are endeavouring to drive out the guerrillas entrenched in dugouts in the abandoned villages on the western outskirts of the Settlement.—Reuter.
